We know that in order to generate beautiful writing skills in students, we first witness that psycho physiological functions such as attention, intuition, perception, memory do not work well. It is evident in some students. Therefore, we educators are required, first of all, to teach the student to perceive educational materials in order to master knowledge. Organizing the material to be perceived, clearly showing the source to be studied or its image, making the statement clear and consistent, writing beautifully on the class board so that everyone can see are the arguments that ensure the successful output of perception. The child begins to draw different shapes by taking a pencil in his hand earlier than stepping into school, but while these lines do not meet the requirements of beautiful writing, they contribute to the formation of certain skills in them (pen, pencil holder). Since the finger muscles of young children are not well developed, chronic typing and exercise on them negatively affects the quality of writing. A person perceives objects and objects in the outside world, and also realizes the movement of organs in his body and their state. Perception-its influence on the external nervous system is formed due to the influence of the actions of the motherland. With the help of the eye, ear apparatus, skin sensation, muscle and internal organic sensations, a person perceives color, music Tone, Weight, his own balance of movement.

As a result of the effect of objects on the sensory organs, a trace appears on the cerebral cortex in the way of new nerve connections. These nerve connections are the physiological basis of perception and intuition. These connections are strengthened and maintained in the brain. This circumstance allows us to bring into memory what we perceive and perceive. The writing process is carried out through various writing weapons (Pen, Pen, chalk), and depending on which writing weapon is used, hand movements are adjusted accordingly. When teaching beautiful writing, the first step is to instill the following qualifications:

1. Correct use of writing guns.
2. Put the notebook correctly on the part.
3. Keeping the torso straight while writing and moving the elbows straight.
4. Teaching to compare one's own letter with a given sample.
5. Teaching sound to be translated into a printed letter, and printed letters into a written form.
6. To the perception of The Shape of the letters (where to start the inscription, where to finish, to the right, left, turn, tie, etc. k) teach.

7. Teaching to write letters together.

8. Teaching letters to write flat at the same height and width.

So, before teaching elementary students to write beautifully, it is necessary to give the following qualifications. The reader is encouraged by the letters and elements he originally wrote, self-confidence increases and is not afraid to write more difficult letters. Therefore, it is necessary to pay attention to strengthening their will in the formation of initial writing skills in students. Kata plays a role in this, in which the teacher chooses assignments that children can easily complete. During this period, the upbringing of psychological characteristics in children as well as taking into account their physiological growth is an important task of our primary school teachers.

Good knowledge of the rules of beautiful writing contributes to the formation of writing skills. For example, in Grade 1, the rules for keeping the height and slope of letters uniform in words based on requirements such as initially sitting upright, holding the pen upright, placing the notebook in the correct position, and writing letter elements and their spacing at the same distance in words arise. Teaching a beautiful writing skill from Grade 2 requires rules such as writing small and capital letters of the same height, writing words of 4-5 letters without interrupting hand movement, writing quickly and cleanly. By beautiful writing, we understand the writing, which is written in clean and clear lines, as shown in the samples of the writing.

Teaching to write quickly and fluently.

Writing letters quickly and fluently flat, while teaching them to write at the same height and width, is one of the important requirements of beautiful writing. The main secret of writing beautifully and quickly is its smooth movement of the same size. Writing in unison, each letter and its elements at the same height and slope discover a special beauty. When increasing the speed of recording, it is necessary to pay attention to the fact that the children's hand movement is in one rhythm, not allowing the fingers to get tired. Instilling beautiful writing skills in children in elementary grades requires endurance and skill from each teacher.
