Although he was affected by the harsh trials of colonialism, he was always loyal to the humanitarian ideals, and the spirit of love for the Motherland, and gained fame in the hearts of our people. In the crisis of agriculture in the early 1980s in the former Soviet Union, the political leader of Uzbekistan Sh.R. Rashidov carried out significant positive activities in providing the country's agrarian complex with financial funds and necessary resources, as well as in other directions of the economic and cultural construction of those years. Even though he was forced to follow the flow of the Center's policy, he tried to protect the national interests of the people, especially the rural population and farmers, to the extent of the opportunities allowed; managed to obtain the necessary funds and material resources to improve the general standard of living, help the villages, and transform our republic into a purely agrarian country, and worked tirelessly towards its goals. Sh. Rashidov was able to use every available opportunity to protect the interests of the people and improve their standard of living. He was able to unite the people toward this goal.

Sh.Rashidov is a leader who was able to organize the work, life, and livelihood of people mobilized to the desert. His leadership and human qualities, the constructive services he has performed for the region, especially his great services in ensuring peace and stability in international politics, are an example of his leadership skills. The construction of many important objects in Uzbekistan, including in villages, is associated with the name of Sharif Rashidov. With his direct participation, significant changes were made in terms of the material and technical basis of agriculture, strengthening its potential. However, the capabilities of the national leader were limited. The center defined the ideology and strategy of agrarian construction, the essence of which remained primarily the rapid development of cotton cultivation. For the successful development of cotton, first of all, it was decided to create a cotton industry base. At the same time, the importance of simultaneously creating a strong material and technical base for the complete industrialization of agriculture prompted the establishment of cotton-ginning factories in almost all regions and state farms of the Republic. In 1966, the opening of a new stage in the direction of irrigation and land reclamation provided an opportunity to solve problems in the field of land irrigation and irrigation.

From 1963 to 1968, a large number of modern construction techniques began to operate in the development of the Karshi desert. 1964 6 large pumping stations with a length of 77 km - Karshi construction of the main channel started Jizzakh, Karshi, Mirzachol, Central Ferghana and of the Republic another many invalid their husbands in mastering service state of the leader village farm development regarding attention owner from potential is evidence. The government of Leonid Brezhnev years Delivery of cotton to Uzbekistan increase about the end no decisions come was standing To this in response Uzbek government " by adding write ” account always field areas irrigation and the cotton crop about from before bigger numbers they
